THE UNDERGROUND

One night, two plumbers were finishing their shift in the sewers, they just had to slightly adjust a pipe, then they could go home for the weekend. "Hey hurry up man!" Said one of the plumbers, he was thin but a bit small, "I don't like it down here..."

"Well if you really don't like it, you can hop on a subway" The other plumber said, he was a bit smaller than the other plumber and had a moustache.

Suddenly, they heard a bang noise coming from slightly further down the tunnel. "Hey man, did you hear that?" Said the thin small plumber. "Yeah what was that?" The plumber with the moustache asked, a bit scared.

"Should we go check?" Said the thin small plumber, someone could have hurt themselves!" "Are you nuts?" Said the plumber with the moustache, "Have you ever seen horror movies? People always go missing when they investigate suspicious noises in dark tunnels." The thin small plumber ignored him and walked around the corner. The plumber with the moustache was about to go with him when he heard a deafening screech and his friend scream, the plumber ran to investigate but froze in fear when he saw blood splatter onto the wall like a bug on a windshield. The plumber tried to run away but he was grabbed by the ankles and was dragged away from the exit.

The plumber thought this would be how he died but he remembered he had a wrench in his pocket, so he tore the wrench out of his pocket and stabbed into whatever had grabbed him, there was a ear-piercing scream of agony, and without even catching his breath, the plumber sprinted at the ladder and when he was halfway up, the terrifying massive creature leaped up and jumped toward him. The plumber screamed as he threw his wrench right through the so they always went on road trips, walks or even adventures! They had been to lots of places but they all wanted to have a go at the competition to try and win the key. All of them was dying to know where it lead to.

For the next couple of days they trained as hard as they could ate as healthy as possible and got ready for the competition. The competition was a random activity, It could be anything.

Storm

Did they win the key?
 The day had came! It was time for all 5 of them to try and get that key. They all lined up next to each other and waited for the race to begin. The coach shouted "Today's activity is running!". The girls thought this was going to be easy. The race started and everybody started to run. Except Ellie. She noticed that behind her was a trail and started walking towards it. It lead her down a path way where it was dark and mysterious, she didn't know where she was going. As she got to the end of the path she saw a coffin looking thing standing upwards, it was covered in tree vines and mould. She wiggled the handle in terror and opened the door.
 I don't have enough space so I will make another page...

That night the girl screamed as if something was wrong and then the two men came to the room that the girl was in. they opened the door and then she raised up her arm and stared at them. They slowly fell to the ground after being strangled by the air. The man ran along the corridor as the girl walked out the room. The girl screamed as she threw the man across the corridor using her mind. Her nose bled; this happens when she uses her powers. She walked around the building trying to find an exit when she came across people she would just throw them across the room. She was walking and walking until she found this room. The girl walked in. there was a massive red throbbing thing in the wall. The girl walks closer and closer to the thing on the wall. The girl touches the thing. The girl touches the thing. She puts her hand into the thing. She moves it around and walks into it.

She was in another dimension. All the girl could see was trees and green branches that were surrounding the red thing. The girl screamed. Then in the distance the girl heard a scream. It sounded like a young boy's voice. The girl started running in the direction of the voice. She heard it again and again until it was so loud she thought that he must be close. The girl screamed and finally the two bumped into each other. The boy was short and had brown hair. His clothes were covered in mud and scratches.

"Where are we," asked the boy.
 "I don't know," replied the girl.
 "I'm Mike, who are you," said Mike.
 "Me?" questioned the girl.
 "What is your name?" asked Mike again.
 "What is name?" Said the girl.
 "Something people call you," said Mike

Once upon a beautiful day, there was a man named Joe. Joe Was a fisherman, but not just any fisherman, he was a famous fisherman. He was famous for the things he caught. He would find priceless artifacts and sell them to the museum for money, which made him rich. In fact, he was so rich that he had a rebuild of the titanic for his new fishing boat which he now called The Fantastic Fish Baiter. One day, on a normal summer day, he went fishing and found a tooth. But this wasn't any tooth. This tooth belonged to the ancient mythical water snake Venomari. The monster was known as Blue Shadow the Terrorist. He would sink any boat he saw and had eight tails for destroying them. His teeth would light up a dark blue and purple. Joe looked at the tooth. There was a flickering light inside it. He decided to keep it for himself. He put it in an empty bucket and sailed to the shore for home.

The next day he went out once more before the weekend where he'd have his days off. He saw a dark blue and purple light approaching. He picked up the bucket and took out the tooth. The Tooth was a lot brighter than before. There was a whirlpool ahead. He clambered into the cabin and set sail for shore but the whirlpool started to follow him. The boat went faster and faster and the whirlpool went faster and faster. It came to the part where a dark blue, purple energized tentacle arose from the middle of the whirlpool and hovered idle over the boat. The whirlpool came up on the left of Joe's boat. Joe steered right but the tentacle kept pulling it back and eventually seven more tentacles made an appearance and shot up into the sky past the clouds. One of the tentacles went back down. The two tentacles in the water held the boat and the boat stopped moving and was carried out of the water. The other six tentacles wrapped around themselves. They then uncovered a giant fist. It started sludging to the ground. As it got closer and closer, Joe leaped out of the cabin and I was lost for words when I heard that the experiment was a success. I ran into the aquarium and saw the whale swimming not through the water, but the air. Lucy said that the creature would be monitored through the night and if it remained healthy, soon we would also have a pod of dolphins and a turtle in our sky aquarium. After that was going to be fish if we could get them to breathe air.

The next morning I jumped out of bed and within five minutes I had got dressed and had breakfast. I brushed my teeth and almost left the door without my shoes and coat. I ran down the street and went through the lab entrance where I almost knocked Jason over. I spotted Lucy talking to Sky so I walked over to them.

"How is the whale?" I asked Lucy.
"Sky was telling me that he is fine and that he also seems to like eating dust mites," Lucy replied. "We should soon be doing the first dolphin. Oh, Jason also wants to talk to you about the fish."
"OK, bye!" I told them and I went to the fish room.

Sophie

The fish room is where the fish-based experiments take place. Jason works there, and he is often diving into the tanks to take samples from their scales. I knew that it was going to smell of salt and fish so I got my nose prepared. Jason wants to get a ventilation system but our boss won't bother to get one installed so instead we open the window if the stench gets too pungent.
